Instructions on Baidu Map

Avoid Virus by Avoiding Crowded Areas

Baidu Map just included in their App 3 handy features to help avoiding crowded areas in your city and to find the right clinic nearby once you need an urgent inspection.

Unfortunately, this service isn't available in English; but don't worry if you cannot read Chinese characters, we'll decipher it for you.
By avoiding crowded areas, you are likely to reduce your exposure to the virus.

Baidu Map now can color your city map according to the density of people in that particular area. More dense areas will be shown in dark brown/red and the less density of people the color turns yellow, green and finally blue.

If you don't have Baidu Map on your mobile already; you may search in any App store for Baidu Map (百度地图）.

After you open the App; follow the below chart A1 to A2 to view the human-density map.

The color warmth refers to the density of people with red and brown for highly populated areas that you better avoid

swisscham.org

View Confirmed Infections

The Map Shows the distribution of virus according to the number of confirmed infected cases in every province

Baidu Map now offers a national map showing the number of infected people in every region. The map is updated timely and can be accessed by using the below steps B1 & B2:

swisscham.org

View Clinics and Pharmacies

Just in case you felt uncomfortable and wanted to look for a clinic for medical check or a pharmacy; Baidu Map can show the clinics and pharmacies around you. So if you had a fever and wanted to do a medical examination, try to reach to the closest clinic which you can see by tapping on C3. The red locators that appear show to the fever clinics.

The map can also show which hospitals/pharmacies that accept the local medical insurance cards or the national. As you might already know (or not), when you pay medical insurance through a Shanghai company, hospitals in another province don't necessarily accept that card for medical payments. So if you are now in the same city where you pay your medical insurance, you may tap C6, otherwise C5.

swisscham.org